

Luminous Group Consulting LLC:

SharePoint Services

Whether you are considering Microsoft SharePoint because your company simply needs a new intranet portal or there are more specific drivers such as the need for better companywide document management or the ability to surface information from several back-end systems in one place, Luminous Group have the technical expertise in SharePoint to support your deployment. We have worked with SharePoint since its initial launch in 2000 and created successful deployments for many customers, integrating the services it offers into effective systems of practice - which help them to reach their business goals.

Most important, Luminous have a unique, practical approach to technology; we focus on people and collaborative teams. Our approach ensures that the goals of the people and teams are included as a core component of any technology deployment. This, in turn, engages users, improves adoption rates, and drives higher levels of proficiency, ensuring a greater return on the technology investment.

Tools like SharePoint offer a plethora of options and it is often a great challenge to determine what features will be useful, how much value they will create, and how best to determine exactly what to deploy – and to whom. Luminous’ ethnographic approach takes the guesswork out of this process and ensures buy-in from end users before deployment ever begins.

At Luminous, the reason why we get SharePoint deployments right is because we take the time to understand the people who will be using them, their goals, and the culture where they will be used. Our SharePoint deployments becomes cultural centerpieces, the “go-to” place for information in the company, along the way creating a cadre of users in your organization who are passionate about what they can achieve with these tools - and with each other.

Before you take your next step deploying SharePoint, contact Luminous and talk with us about how best to engage your organization before the deployment happens so that you too can reap the substantial benefits that this collaborative system can help create.

Our end-to-end services can support deployment planning, rollout, training, and optimization within your company.
