

Luminous Group Consulting LLC:

Team Foundation Server Services

Whether you are considering Microsoft Team Foundation Server because your company is looking to upgrade its source control system, take advantage of the integrated work item tracking, or leverage the integrated reporting services built into the product, Luminous Group have the technical expertise to support your deployment. Our team have worked with the Team Foundation Server product since 2004 when it was first in Beta and have helped many customers successfully integrate the services it offers into effective systems of practice, helping them to realize their goals.

Most important, Luminous have a unique, practical approach to technology; we focus on people and collaborative teams. Our approach ensures that the goals of the people and teams are included as a core component of any technology deployment. This, in turn, engages users, improves adoption rates, and drives higher levels of proficiency, ensuring a greater return on the technology investment.

Tools like Team Foundation Server offer a plethora of options and it is often a great challenge to determine what features will be useful, how much value they will create, and how best to determine exactly what to deploy – and to whom. Luminous’ unique ethnographic approach takes the guesswork out of this process and ensures buy-in from end users before deployment ever begins.

At Luminous, the reason why we get Team Foundation Server deployments right is because we take the time to understand the people who will be using them — as well as the culture where they will be used. Our Team Foundation Server deployments becomes cultural centerpieces, the “go-to” place for information regarding software development within the company, along the way creating a cadre of users in your organization who are passionate about what they can achieve with these tools - and with each other.

Before you take your next step deploying Team Foundation Server, contact Luminous and talk with us about how best to engage your organization before the deployment happens so that you too can reap the substantial benefits that this collaborative system can help create.

Our end-to-end services can support deployment planning, rollout, training, and optimization within your company.
